UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURTDISTRICT OF NEVADA

JUDITH SAMUELS,

Plaintiff,

v.

WE'VE ONLY JUST BEGUN WEDDING
CHAPEL, INC. d/b/a Little White Chapel;
CHAROLETTE RICHARDS, an individual;
and DOES 1 through 50, inclusive,

Defendants.

Case No. 2:13-cv-00923-APG-PAL

ORDER ON MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

(Dkt. #57)

Plaintiff Judith Samuels was employed as a bookkeeper at We've Only Just Begun Wedding Chapel ("WOJB") before being discharged by owner Charolette Richards. Ms. Samuels, who is Jewish, claims that she suffered discrimination and a hostile work environment because of her religious beliefs and practices. I previously dismissed one of Ms. Samuels' claims and remanded five others to the state court. (Dkt. #37 at 7.) Her remaining claims against WOJB and Ms. Richards assert (1) religious discrimination under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act ("Title VII") and Nevada law; (2) religious discrimination based on a failure to accommodate under Title VII and Nevada law; (3) harassment/hostile work environment; and (4) intentional infliction of emotional distress. Defendants now seek summary judgment on all of these claims. Defendants also request that I dismiss Ms. Richards from this lawsuit, arguing that there are no valid claims asserted against her.

There are genuine disputes as to whether WOJB discriminated against Ms. Samuels when they terminated her and whether they failed to accommodate her religious practices. But the defendants are entitled to summary judgment on Ms. Samuels' discrimination claims based on her salary and her claims of harassment/hostile work environment and intentional infliction of emotional distress. Ms. Samuels has offered no evidence that religion was a factor in her salary. Further, no reasonable jury could find that a hostile work environment existed or that the defendants' conduct was extreme or outrageous or constituted harassment. Finally, Title VII does not permit claims against individuals, so Ms. Richards is entitled to judgment on the Title VII

1 claims. However, Ms. Samuels also brought religious discrimination claims against Ms. Richards
2 based on Nevada law. The defendants do not address the Nevada law aspects of these claims in 3 their summary judgment motion and therefore, as explained below, I deny summary judgment for 4 Ms. Richards as to the remaining Nevada law claims against her.

5 I. BACKGROUND

6 WOJB operates the Little White Wedding Chapel, which provides wedding ceremonies to 7 its customers. Ms. Richards is the president and owner of WOJB. WOJB employed Ms. Samuels
8 as a part-time bookkeeper between December 2010 and April 2011. Ms. Samuels was first placed 9 at WOJB by a temporary agency in September 2010. (Dkt. #57-1 at 9; Dkt. #58-1 at 12.) She 10 worked part-time at WOJB, receiving approximately $13-$15 per hour from the temporary 11 agency for this work. (Dkt. #57-1 at 9, 11.) In December 2010, Ms. Samuels accepted a position
12 with WOJB as a part-time bookkeeper for a salary of $18 per hour. (Id. at 19.)

13 Ms. Samuels is Jewish and observes the Jewish holidays. Ms. Samuels states that while 14 employed by WOJB: (1) Ms. Richards conducted prayer sessions at the end of staff meetings that 15 made her uncomfortable, (2) she felt compelled to attend one after-work prayer service, (3) Ms.
16 Richards sang Christian songs to her both at work and over the telephone, and (4) that Ms.
17 Richards does not deny once telling her, "You know the Jews killed our Savior." (Dkt. #57-1 at 18 31-37; Dkt. #58-1 at 63-64.) Ms. Samuels further alleges that she believes she was paid less than 19 prior bookkeepers because of her religion. (Dkt. #10 at 4.) Neither Ms. Samuels nor Ms.
20 Richards is sure when Ms. Richards learned that Ms. Samuels was Jewish, but at the latest Ms.
21 Richards would have been aware of this fact in March 2011 when Ms. Samuels asked for time off 22 to celebrate the Passover holiday. (Dkt. #57-1 at 14-15.) The defendants contend that Ms.
23 Samuels was never required to attend any prayer services and Ms. Richards' singing of Christian 24 songs in the office was not directed at Ms. Samuels specifically. (Dkt. #57-1 at 31-35.)

25 Ms. Richards initially approved Ms. Samuels' request to take off April 18 and 19 to 26 celebrate Passover with her family. (Id. at 14-15.) Around that same time, Ms. Samuels also 27

1 asked for an advance on her salary to travel to a family member's bar mitzvah. (Id. at 16-17.) Ms.
2 Richards also granted this request. (Id.) On the evening of April 18, on the first night of Passover
3 and after Ms. Samuels had taken the day off, Ms. Richards terminated Ms. Samuels via a text 4 message which read:

5 "Judy I did not want to call you as I know this is a special time for you.
6 However if I allow you to take off for a special holiday I would have to 7 allow everyone that works here to take off for special holidays. That is 8 stated in our handbook and as you have explained to people you have stated
9 during here (sic) orientation .ZAlong (sic) with the fact I had to search for a 10 long while to find some of the insurance papers for the limos[.] Guess where 11 I finally found some of them? In a file folder named miscellaneous .ZI (sic)
12 will have your check ready Wednesday Charolette."¹

13 (Id. at 73-76.)

14 Ms. Richards says that Ms. Samuels was never discriminated against and that Ms.
15 Samuels' religion had nothing to do with her termination. Rather, she says that there were several 16 reasons why Ms. Samuels was terminated and all relate to her poor work performance, including 17 that she had failed to keep a clean work area, manipulated WOJB's payroll system, and that she 18 had failed to maintain its ATM machine. (Dkt. #57 at 28-29; Dkt. # 57-1 at 25-26; 28-29.)
19 According to Ms. Richards, the concerns she had with Ms. Samuels' performance came to a head 20 over the Passover holiday when it was discovered that certain of WOJB's vehicles did not have 21 their proper proof of insurance information which resulted in a WOJB driver being ticketed. (Dkt.
22 #57 at 32; Dkt. #57-1 at 28-29.)

23 Ms. Richards does not remember if she ever discussed with Ms. Samuels any of her poor 24 work habits prior to Ms. Samuels' termination. (Dkt. #58-1 at 52.) Ms. Samuels states Ms.
25 Richards never spoke to her about any concerns about her performance. (Dkt. #58-1 at 13.) Ms.

27 ¹ The substance of the text is reproduced as it was given in the exhibits. Any grammatical errors
28 are from the original. (Dkt. #57-1 at 73-76.)

1 Samuels also contends that many of the performance issues the defendants complain of are events
2 for which she was not responsible. For example, she states that she was not responsible for 3 loading the ATM machine the day it was improperly maintained and that Ms. Richards' grandson, 4 not Ms. Samuels, had been delegated the responsibility of placing the proof of insurance in 5 WOJB's vehicles. (Dkt. #58-1 at 25-26; 32-33.)

6 II. ANALYSIS

8 Summary judgment is appropriate when the pleadings, discovery responses, and affidavits 9 "show there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the movant is entitled to judgment 10 as a matter of law." Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 330 (1986) (citing Fed. R. Civ. P.
11 56(c)). For summary judgment purposes, the court views all facts and draws all inferences in the 12 light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Kaiser Cement Corp. v. Fishbach & Moore, Inc., 13 793 F.2d 1100, 1103 (9th Cir. 1986).

14 If the moving party demonstrates the absence of any genuine issue of material fact, the 15 burden shifts to the nonmoving party to "set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine 16 issue for trial." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 256 (1986); Celotex, 477 U.S. at 17 323. The nonmoving party "must do more than simply show that there is some metaphysical 18 doubt as to the material facts." Bank of Am. v. Orr, 285 F.3d 764, 783 (9th Cir. 2002) (internal 19 citations omitted). She "must produce specific evidence, through affidavits or admissible 20 discovery material, to show" a sufficient evidentiary basis on which a reasonable fact finder could 21 find in her favor. Bhan v. NME Hosps., Inc., 929 F.2d 1404, 1409 (9th Cir. 1991); Anderson, 477
22 U.S. at 248-49.

23 A. Religious discrimination

24 Ms. Samuels' Seventh Cause of Action asserts a religious discrimination claim against the 25 defendants under Title VII and Nevada Revised Statutes § 613.310, et seq., alleging that she was 26 both paid less and terminated because of her religion. (Dkt. #10 at 16-17.) The defendants argue 27 that Ms. Samuels was terminated for legitimate, non-discriminatory reasons related to her poor 28

1 work performance. They further argue that the events which Ms. Samuels cites to as allegedly 2 discriminatory do not support a claim for religious discrimination. Specifically, they argue that 3 they never required or demanded that Ms. Samuels attend any prayer services and that Ms.
4 Richards' singing of Christian songs was not specifically directed at Ms. Samuels. Finally, they 5 argue that Ms. Samuels has not put forth any evidence: (1) that previous bookkeepers were paid 6 more than her, (2) about the religion of those bookkeepers, or (3) that any difference in pay was 7 based on religion.

8 In response, Ms. Samuels argues that Ms. Richards' text informing her of her termination, 9 directly references her request to take time off for Passover. Further, she argues that all of the 10 defendants' non-religious reasons for terminating her were manufactured after the fact and 11 conflict with the reason given in Ms. Richards' text.

12 Title VII makes it unlawful for an employer "to discharge any individual, or otherwise to 13 discriminate against any individual with respect to his compensation, terms, conditions, or 14 privileges of employment" because of religion. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1). N.R.S. § 15 613.330(1)(a) makes the same conduct unlawful under state law. Claims for unlawful 16 discrimination under § 613.330 are analyzed under the same principles applied to similar Title 17 VII claims. See Apeceche v. White Pine Co., 615 P.2d 975, 977-78 (Nev. 1980) (comparing §
18 613.330 to section 703(a)(1) of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and analyzing § 613.330
19 according to federal precedent); see also Wilson v. Greater Las Vegas Ass'n of Realtors, No.
20 2:14-CV-00362-APG-NJK, 2015 WL 1014365, at *4 (D. Nev. Mar. 9, 2015). Accordingly, I will 21 address Ms. Samuels' state and federal claims of religious discrimination based on a protected 22 class together.

23 To prevail on a Title VII discrimination claim based on a protected class, the plaintiff 24 must establish a prima facie case by presenting evidence that "gives rise to an inference of 25 unlawful discrimination." Cordova v. State Farm Ins. Co., 124 F.3d 1145, 3148 (9th Cir. 1997);
26 see also McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green, 411 U.S. 792, 802 (1973). A plaintiff can establish 27 a prima facie case through direct evidence or through circumstantial evidence via the burden 28

1 shifting framework set forth in McDonnell Douglas. See Metoyer v. Chassman, 504 F.3d 919, 931
2 (9th Cir. 2007).²

3 Religious discrimination occurs if the plaintiff's religion was a "motivating factor for any 4 employment practice, even though other factors also motivated the practice." 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5 2(m). "[A] single discriminatory comment by a plaintiff's supervisor or decisionmaker is 6 sufficient to preclude summary judgment for the employer" in a Title VII discrimination case.
7 Dominguez-Curry v. Nev. Transp. Dep't, 424 F.3d 1027, 1039 (9th Cir. 2005); see also Coghlan
8 v. Am. Seafoods Co. LLC, 413 F.3d 1090, 1094-95 (9th Cir. 2005); Godwin v. Hunt Wesson, Inc.,
9 150 F.3d 1217, 1221 (9th Cir. 1998) ("When the plaintiff offers direct evidence of discriminatory
10 motive, a triable issue as to the actual motivation of the employer is created even if the evidence 11 is not substantial.").

12 Here, there is direct evidence of discrimination. In cases where direct evidence of 13 discriminatory animus is present, the McDonnell Douglas framework requiring a prima facie
14 showing of discrimination is inapplicable.³ Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston, 469 U.S. 111, 15 121 (1985) ("[T]he McDonnell Douglas test is inapplicable where the plaintiff presents direct 16 evidence of discrimination."). For example, in Nguyen v. Qualcomm, Inc., the plaintiff's sworn

19 ² Neither party cites to the appropriate standard for analysis of a discrimination claim based on a 20 protected class. The defendants have cited the standard used to analyze a discrimination claim based on a 21 failure to accommodate. While Ms. Samuels has also brought a separate claim for failing to accommodate her religious practices, this particular Title VII claim is based on the allegation that Ms. Samuels was paid less and terminated because she is Jewish. Therefore, she is claiming discrimination based on a protected class.

22 ³ When there is an absence of direct evidence, the plaintiff carries the initial burden of establishing 23 a prima facie case. McDonnell Douglas, 411 U.S. at 802. The plaintiff must show that (1) she belongs to a 24 protected class; (2) she was qualified for her position and performed her job satisfactorily; (3) she 25 experienced an adverse employment action; and (4) similarly situated individuals outside her protected 26 class were treated more favorably, or other circumstances surrounding the adverse employment action give rise to an inference of discrimination. Hawn v. Executive Mgmt, Inc., 615 F.3d 1151, 1156 (9th Cir. 2010).
27 If the plaintiff establishes her prima facie case, "the burden of production, but not persuasion, then shifts to the employer to articulate some legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the challenged action." Id. at 28 1155 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). If the employer meets its burden, then the plaintiff must prove that the employer's proffered reasons for the termination are mere pretext for unlawful discrimination. Id.

1 declaration alleged that her supervisor made discriminatory comments such as: “You are a
2 Vietnamese woman, you have to listen to me. Don’t complain [sic] anything, just come to work
3 and finish your project.” 501 F. App’x 691, 693–94 (9th Cir. 2012). The Ninth Circuit held this 4 testimony constituted direct evidence of discriminatory animus and created “a genuine issue of 5 material fact on whether Nguyen’s gender and Vietnamese national origin were motivating
6 factors in her termination.” Id. (citations omitted).

7 Making all inferences in Ms. Samuels’ favor, she has submitted evidence creating a triable
8 issue as to whether her religion was a motivating factor for her termination. Ms. Samuels was 9 informed of her termination through a text message from Ms. Richards which states, in part,
10 “Judy I did not want to call you as I know this is a special time for you. However if I allow you 11 to take off for a special holiday I would have to allow everyone that works here to take off for 12 special holidays.” (Dkt. #57-1 at 73-74.) Defendants point to the rest of the text which makes 13 reference to the misplaced vehicle insurance as proof that the reason for the termination was non-14 discriminatory. (Id. at 74-76.) However, the latter part of the message does not negate the former.
15 In addition to the text message, viewing the facts and making all inferences in Ms. Samuels’
16 favor, Ms. Richards often sang religious songs to Ms. Samuels, Ms. Richards conducted prayer
17 services at work that Ms. Samuels felt required to attend, and Ms. Richards does not deny telling 18 Ms. Samuels, “You know the Jews killed our Savior.” (Dkt. #58-1 at 34-36; 64.)⁴ While the 19 defendants dispute Ms. Samuels’ characterization of Ms. Richards’ workplace singing, whether 20 Ms. Samuels was required to attend prayer services, and whether Ms. Richards ever made the 21 statement attributed to her, I must view the facts in the light most favorable to Ms. Samuels.
22 These circumstances, coupled with the substance of the text telling Ms. Samuels she was 23 terminated, create an issue of fact as to whether Ms. Samuels was terminated, in part, because she

26 ⁴ Ms. Samuels also alleges that Ms. Richards looked for horns on Ms. Samuels’ head while curling 27 her hair. However, the evidence does not support this. At her deposition, Ms. Samuels stated that it “kind 28 of felt like” Ms. Richards was “looking at my head looking for my horns.” (Dkt. #61-1 at 19.) There is no evidence Ms. Richards actually did that or made any statement to that effect.

1 is Jewish.

2 As to the allegation that Ms. Samuels was paid less because she was Jewish, Ms. Samuels
3 has failed to provide any evidence that the defendants knew she was Jewish at the time she was 4 hired and her salary was set. She also has not provided evidence of the religion of previous 5 bookkeepers she believes were paid more or evidence that any difference in pay was based on 6 religion. Therefore, her claim for religious discrimination based on her salary fails.

7 I therefore grant partial summary judgment to the defendants on the Seventh Cause of 8 Action to the extent it is based on Ms. Samuels' salary. However, because there are triable issues
9 as to whether Ms. Samuels was terminated, at least in part, because of a protected characteristic, I
10 deny summary judgment on the portion of the Seventh Cause of Action that is based on her
11 termination. Ms. Samuels may proceed with her Seventh Cause of Action against WOJB
12 asserting liability under both Title VII and Nevada law based on her termination. As explained
13 below, she may proceed with her Seventh Cause of Action against Ms. Richards asserting liability 14 only under Nevada law based on her termination.

15 B. Religious discrimination – failure to accommodate 16 Ms. Samuels' Ninth Cause of Action asserts a religious discrimination claim against the 17 defendants under Title VII and Nevada law based on a "failure to accommodate" theory, alleging 18 that the defendants failed to reasonably accommodate her religious practices and beliefs. (Dkt.

19 #10 at 18-19.) Ms. Samuels has not stated under which Nevada law she asserts this claim, nor 20 have the defendants argued for summary judgment on Ms. Samuels' claim under Nevada law.
21 Therefore, I review the defendants' motion for summary judgment only as to Ms. Samuels' Title 22 VII claim for failure to accommodate.

23 As noted above, Title VII makes it an unlawful employment practice for an employer "to 24 discharge any individual . . . because of such individual's . . . religion." 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-
25 2(a)(1). Title VII defines "religion" to include "all aspects of religious observance and practice, 26 as well as belief, unless an employer demonstrates that he is unable to reasonably accommodate 27

1 to an employee's or prospective employee's religious observance or practice without undue
2 hardship on the conduct of the employer's business." 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(j).

3 Claims for failure to accommodate are analyzed using a two-part framework. Heller v.
4 EBB Auto Co., 8 F.3d 1433, 1438 (9th Cir. 1993). First, Ms. Samuels must establish a prima 5 facie case by proving that: (1) she had a bona fide religious belief, the practice of which 6 conflicted with an employment duty; (2) she informed her employer of the belief and conflict; and 7 (3) the employer threatened her or subjected her to discriminatory treatment, including discharge,
8 because of her inability to fulfill the job requirements. See id. If the employee proves a prima 9 facie case of discrimination, the burden shifts to the employer to show either that it initiated good 10 faith efforts to reasonably accommodate the employee's religious practices or that it could not 11 reasonably accommodate the employee without undue hardship. See Tiano v. Dillard Dep't.
12 Stores, Inc., 139 F.3d 679, 681 (9th Cir. 1998).

13 As described above, and viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to Ms. Samuels,
14 Ms. Samuels has demonstrated a prima facie case: she asked for time off to celebrate Passover 15 and was terminated as a result. The defendants respond that Ms. Samuels received days off for 16 Passover and therefore her religious practices were reasonably accommodated. But they 17 subsequently terminated her on the first night of the holiday. A reasonable jury could find that 18 Ms. Samuels' request for days off for Passover influenced the decision to terminate her. The 19 circumstances of Ms. Samuels' termination create an issue of fact as to whether the defendants 20 made reasonable efforts to accommodate her religious practices. As a result, the defendants'
21 motion for summary judgment on this claim is denied. Ms. Samuels may proceed with her Ninth 22 Cause of Action against WOJB asserting liability under both Title VII and Nevada law based on 23 her "failure to accommodate" theory. However, as explained below, she may proceed with her 24 Ninth Cause of Action against Ms. Richards asserting liability only under Nevada law.

25 ////

26 ////

27 ////

1 C. Harassment/hostile work environment based on religion

2 Ms. Samuels does not specify under which law she is seeking relief for her Eighth Cause
3 of Action, which asserts harassment/hostile work environment. In their motion, the defendants
4 cite Title VII legal standards and precedent. (Dkt. #57 at 10-11.) In her opposition Ms. Samuels
5 adopts the Title VII legal standard and offers no other legal basis for this claim. (Dkt. #58 at 8-9.)
6 Therefore, I presume that Ms. Samuels asserts this claim based on Title VII liability only.

7 Under Title VII, to prevail on a hostile work environment claim based on religion, Ms.
8 Samuels must show that: (1) she was subject to verbal or physical conduct of a harassing nature 9 that was based on her religion; (2) the conduct was unwelcome; and (3) the conduct was 10 sufficiently severe or pervasive as to alter the conditions of her employment and create an abusive 11 work environment. See Kang v. U. Lim America, Inc., 296 F.3d 810, 817 (9th Cir. 2002); Cohen-
12 Breen v. Gray Television Grp., Inc., 661 F. Supp. 2d 1158, 1167 (D. Nev. 2009). Defendants 13 allege that the environment at the chapel was not sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the 14 conditions of her employment or create an abusive working environment. Viewing the facts in a 15 light most favorable to Ms. Samuels, I agree.

16 To determine whether conduct was sufficiently severe or pervasive, I consider “all the 17 circumstances, including the frequency of the discriminatory conduct; its severity; whether it is 18 physically threatening or humiliating, or a mere offensive utterance; and whether it unreasonably 19 interferes with an employee’s work performance.” Clark County Sch. Dist. v. Breeden, 532 U.S.
20 268, 270-71 (2001). “The working environment must both subjectively and objectively be 21 perceived as abusive.” Fuller v. City of Oakland, California, 47 F.3d 1522, 1527 (9th Cir. 1995)
22 (citing Harris v. Forklift Sys., Inc., 510 U.S. 17 (1993)).

23 Here, Ms. Samuels has failed to establish that the alleged conduct by the defendants, even 24 if true, would create an environment that is sufficiently severe or pervasive to create an abusive 25 working environment. Ms. Samuels complains that defendants conducted prayer sessions at the 26 end of staff meetings that made her uncomfortable, that she felt compelled to attend one prayer
27 service held after work, that Ms. Richards sang Christian songs at her, that she once felt as though 28

1 Ms. Richards was looking for horns when Ms. Richards curled Ms. Samuels' hair, and that Ms.
2 Richards does not deny saying to her, "You know the Jews killed our Savior." (Dkt. #58-1 at 34-3 37; 63-64.) Ms. Samuels offers no evidence of physically threatening or humiliating conduct by 4 the defendants. She also fails to explain how these actions or comments altered the conditions of 5 her employment or how they unreasonably interfered with her work performance. Ms. Samuels 6 argues that her eventual termination is evidence that the conditions of her employment were 7 altered because of the hostile work environment, but she cites no authority for this. Even taking 8 into account Ms. Samuels's termination, the conduct she alleges is not severe or offensive enough 9 to sustain a claim for harassment/hostile work environment under Title VII.

10 Ms. Samuels has failed to establish by admissible evidence frequent or severe 11 discriminatory conduct and has failed to show how it unreasonably interfered with her workplace
12 performance. Therefore, I grant the defendant's motion for summary judgment on this claim.

13 D. Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

14 In support of her Tenth Cause of action asserting a claim for intentional infliction of 15 emotional distress ("IIED"), Ms. Samuels relies on the same set of facts as she does to support her 16 religious discrimination and harassment/hostile work environment claims. To prove a claim of 17 IIED in Nevada, Ms. Samuels must show: (1) the defendants' conduct was extreme and 18 outrageous; (2) the defendants either intentionally or recklessly caused the emotional distress; (3)
19 she actually suffered severe or extreme emotional distress; and (4) the defendants' conduct
20 actually or proximately caused her suffering. Star v. Rabello, 625 P.2d 90, 92 (Nev. 1981);
21 Nelson v. City of Las Vegas, 665 P.2d 1141, 1145 (Nev. 1983).

22 A discriminatory termination, by itself, does not constitute extreme and outrageous 23 conduct. Alam v. Reno Hilton Corp., 819 F. Supp. 905, 911 (D. Nev. 1993) ("[T]ermination of 24 employees, even in the context of a discriminatory policy, does not in itself amount to extreme 25 and outrageous conduct actionable under an intentional infliction of emotional distress theory.").
26 Only where an employer's treatment of an employee "go[es] beyond all possible bounds of 27

1 decency, is atrocious[,] and utterly intolerable” will the defendant be liable. Id. at 911.
2 Occasionally treating another person in an inconsiderate, unkind, or rude manner is not enough to 3 support a claim for IIED. Maduike v. Agency Rent-A-Car, 953 P.2d 24, 26 (Nev. 1998) (per 4 curiam) (quotation omitted); Schneider v. TRW, Inc., 938 F.2d 986, 992–93 (9th Cir. 1991)
5 (affirming summary judgment against plaintiff’s IIED claim where her supervisor “screamed and 6 yelled in the process of criticizing her performance, threatened to throw her out of the department
7 and made gestures she interpreted as threatening”). Nor is conduct extreme and outrageous 8 merely because a person knows the other person will “regard the conduct as insulting, or will 9 have h[er] feelings hurt.” Cehade Refai v. Lazaro, 614 F. Supp. 2d 1103, 1121 (D. Nev. 2009).

10 Ms. Samuels has not presented a triable issue as to whether the defendants engaged in 11 extreme and outrageous conduct. Ms. Samuels has cited evidence that she felt compelled to 12 participate in a prayer service, that Ms. Richards sung Christian songs to her, that Ms. Richards 13 does not deny telling her, “You know the Jews killed our Savior,” and that Ms. Samuels was 14 terminated on Passover after receiving permission to take the holiday off.⁵ (Dkt. #58-1 at 34-37; 15 63-64.) Even if all this is true, viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to Ms. Samuels 16 and drawing all reasonable inferences in her favor, this behavior does not rise to the level of 17 extreme and outrageous conduct. See, e.g., Hirschhorn v. Sizzler Restaurants Int’l, Inc., 913 F.
18 Supp. 1393, 1401 (D. Nev. 1995) (termination and derogatory comments not enough to constitute 19 extreme and outrageous conduct).

20 The cases cited by Ms. Samuels are inapposite. Those cases involved conduct more far 21 egregious than what Ms. Samuels alleges here. See e.g., Russo v. Clearwire US, LLC, No. 2:12-
22 CV-01831-PMP-VCF, 2013 WL 1855753 (D. Nev. April 30, 2013) (alleging employer
23 discouraged the plaintiff, who was legally blind, from applying for new management positions

24
25 ⁵ As discussed above, Ms. Samuels’ allegations that the defendants paid her less than non-Jewish 26 bookkeepers and that Ms. Richards looked for horns on Ms. Samuels’ head are not supported by the 27 evidence in the record. Bhan v. NME Hosps., Inc., 929 F.2d 1404, 1409 (9th Cir. 1991) (The nonmoving 28 party “must produce specific evidence, through affidavits or admissible discovery material, to show” a sufficient evidentiary basis on which a reasonable fact finder could find in her favor.)

1 because of his disability, refused him the equipment and software needed to do his job, and 2 moved him to a building with lighting which made it impossible for him to see); Dannenbring v.
3 Wynn Las Vegas, LLC, No. 2:12-CV-00007-JCM-VCF, 2012 WL 3317500 (D. Nev. Aug. 13, 4 2012) (alleging employer refused to allow pregnant employee to switch shifts in order to avoid 5 cigarette smoke, fired her one month before her maternity leave, and retaliated against the 6 employee when she sought unemployment benefits). The one case cited by Ms. Samuels in 7 which the court denied defendants' summary judgment motion on an IIED claim addressed a 8 situation where the employer engaged in far more outrageous conduct than Ms. Samuels alleges 9 happened in this case. In Dillard Dep't Stores, Inc. v. Beckwith, evidence showed that the 10 defendant admitted to the plaintiff that she was demoted because of her worker's compensation 11 claim, that upon demotion the plaintiff was placed in a department where it would be difficult for 12 her to make daily sales quotas, that she was ridiculed by younger employees, and that the 13 plaintiff's complaints about her harmful work environment were ignored. 115 Nev. 372, 378, 384 14 (1999).

15 Here, the defendants' conduct was potentially wrongful, but it was not beyond all possible
16 bounds of decency. I therefore grant summary judgment in defendants' favor on Ms. Samuels'
17 IIED claim.

18 E. Defendant Charolette Richards

19 The defendants argue that Title VII liability is limited to employers and does not extend to 20 individual supervisors, corporate officers, or shareholders. Ms. Samuels concedes that the Ninth 21 Circuit has ruled that Title VII does not extend to individual supervisors, but she argues that other 22 circuits have applied a more liberal construction.

23 Civil liability under Title VII is limited to employers. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(g). Miller v.
24 Maxwell's Int. Inc., 991 F.2d 583, 587 (9th Cir. 1993).⁶ Therefore, I grant summary judgment on 25

26 ⁶ Even if I were inclined to entertain other circuits' standards for Title VII liability, Ms. Samuels
27 misstates the case law she cites from the Fifth Circuit, which held individual defendants liable only in their 28 official capacities and not in their individual capacities. See, e.g., Garcia v. Elf Atochem N. Am., 28 F.3d

Ms. Samuels' Seventh and Ninth Causes of Action asserting Title VII liability against Charolette Richards in her individual capacity. I do not, however, dismiss Ms. Richards from the lawsuit entirely. In addition to her Title VII claims, Ms. Samuels also asserts religious discrimination claims against Ms. Richards based on Nevada law. The defendants do not address these Nevada law claims in their summary judgment motion. I therefore deny the defendants' motion to have Ms. Richards dismissed from this case entirely because I have no basis on which to grant summary judgment on the remaining state law claims against her.

III. CONCLUSION

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the defendants' motion for summary judgment (Dkt. #57) is GRANTED in part and DENIED in part as follows:

1. Summary judgment is granted as to the Eighth Cause of Action claiming harassment/hostile work environment and the Tenth Cause of Action claiming intentional infliction of emotional distress.
2. Summary judgment is granted as to the Seventh Cause of Action for religious discrimination based on Ms. Samuels' salary. Summary judgment is also granted as to the Title VII claims against Charolette Richards individually, as asserted in the Seventh and Ninth Causes of Action. Summary judgment is denied as to all other claims. Ms. Samuels may proceed with her Seventh Cause of Action against WOJB asserting liability under both Title VII and Nevada law based on her termination. She may proceed with her Ninth Cause of Action against WOJB asserting both Title VII and Nevada law claims. She may proceed with her Seventh Cause of Action against Ms. Richards asserting liability only under
